Stink-slinger Profiles: Willie Krudd

WILLIE KRUDD IN 1952

William Huckleberry Friend Krudd was born in Baby Huey, Pa., on Jan. 1, 1901, to Amonia and Wangdoodle Krudd, a pair of naturalized Sleestakes. The 1910 Census lists Willie as a male escort and part-time sand dollar. It shows the family living at a playground at 9857 West Nostril, Ricketts, Pa.

Krudd's noble parental Units lived on Moxie and Hostess Snowballs for several years in order to pay for his education at the Sorbonne. Once in Paris, Krudd got into a cheerless bottlefight with Picasso, Hemingway, and Gertrude Stein. Sadly, when he was exiled back to America, he found his entire family had turned into giant Hostess products. He was traumatized as he tearfully choked down every last bite.

From here he was employed by The New York Graphic. He created a new kind of strip, entitled "Monkey Vomit". Krudd was fired later that day. The concept was re-launched later with the new title "Antics of Arabella".

Krudd then worked for various socialist papers, doing strips secretly written by Ryan Walker. Willie really was a conservative, but he needed the booze money.

After that, our hero found his way to the World Color Printing Co., where he unsuccessfully tried to bring back his favorite strip, Mr. George and dear Wifie. Instead, he was briefly assigned to draw Slim Jim. Krudd innovated a revolutionary new aspect to the moribund feature, but editors rejected the clever concept in which Slim is now caught every week, and violently dealt with by the lovable "Force".

Next, the silly son of a bitch got to think-reckonin' he'd clean up in the burgeoning field of Tijuana Bibles. Among his classic titles were: Uncle Wiggily, Sunflower Street, Sir Harry Larder, Bug Movies, Vidkun Quisling, the Beemans Pepsin Gum Man, Bungleton Green, and the Cheerful Cherub.

The mob located him when he absent-mindedly signed some of these Onanic Onions. They expressed their criticism of his initiative by busting his head.

"YOU WOMEN ARE BAD DRIVERS."

"GOSH, AND AFTER I WON THE POKER GAME"

"YOO HOO"

Throughout the fifties, dumb old Krudd sold an incoherent blend of humor and political cartoon called "Laff N' Think" for the John F. Dille Pickle Co.

His last assignment was to be an assistant to Hal Foster. He spent his last ten dollars on a new suit, soap and sen-sen. When he arrived at the studio, it turned out that he actually was to be ghost artist on "Doctor Funshine". He went home and, over the course of 14 years, committed suicide by watching Deputy Dawg cartoons. He is buried somewhere. (Source: Journal of Abstract Unreality, Swimsuit Issue 1966)
